Small But Mighty Bookclub

WE THANK GOD FOR HIS PROTECTION

In a matter of seconds, Gladson's life could have changed forever.

Gladson, one of Pamoza's field staff in Malawi, was traveling to pick up program materials when a goat suddenly crossed the road. As he tried to avoid it, the vehicle's steering locked and the car overturned. He could have lost his life.

But Gladson walked away with only minor pain. And given that the nearest major hospital is 45 miles away, an accident like this could have been deadly.

"The car was badly damaged, but my life was spared," Gladson shares. "God proved to me that His hand of protection was upon me. I will never stop thanking Him for His mercy and unfailing protection."

Thank you to those who faithfully pray for Pamoza, including for the safety of our staff as they travel the rough roads of rural Malawi to reach the families we serve.

Please thank God with us for protecting Gladson, and pray we can get a reliable vehicle equipped for the realities of our work in Malawi.

Behind the Scenes

It takes many people to make Pamoza's work successful, including those who work behind the scenes without seeking recognition. This quarter, we would like to highlight a special bookclub we're calling the Small but Mighty Bookclub (pictured on left). Find out how these young people read a book that inspired them to make a difference in Malawi. Go to pamoza.org/impact/behind-the-scenes.

Vision Trip 2026

From August 30–September 10, Executive Director Temwa Wright and board members Holton Falk and Chris Falk will travel to Malawi for a special Vision Trip. Together, we will meet with families, staff, community leaders, and Advisory Board members, visit programs, and listen closely to the needs and hopes of those we serve. Our goal is simple: to discern where God is leading Pamoza next. Will you pray with us? Visit pamoza.org/visiontrip for prayer points.

Christian Outreach: Training Church Leaders

Damascus and Thomas are among 36 church leaders being equipped through Pamoza's Church Leaders Training Institute. The training is already multiplying: this quarter, students put what they are learning into practice in their communities, where 68 people accepted Christ.

One student shared, "My preaching is much more scripturally informed." Another said, "I am able to connect the Old Testament and New Testament, and I love it."

Health: Caring for Mothers & Children

Our clinic is temporarily closed for primary care services as we work with the Malawi Medical Council to meet updated requirements and determine what it will take to expand. This closure affects access to health care for the roughly 45,000 people living in the communities we serve. The good news is we continue to provide preventive health education and under-five services, including infant vaccinations and growth monitoring conducted by local health partners at our site. Please pray we can reopen, even on a limited basis, before peak malaria season in March.

Income Generation: Sewing Her Way Forward

Emily once walked 16 miles round-trip to attend Pamoza's tailoring training program while also caring for her family. She persevered, graduated, and now earns income sewing clothes from her home.

Her story reflects a broader change: 93% of Pamoza beneficiaries surveyed reported increased household income, compared with 43% of non-beneficiaries.

Education: Learning at Any Age

For many adults in rural Malawi, the opportunity to attend school never came. Today, learners at Pamoza's adult literacy centers are learning to read, write and work with numbers, skills that are changing everyday life.

One Chagodi learner shared, "Before joining the literacy class, I could not read my Bible or correctly count money. Now I can read simple passages, correctly count my savings, write my name, and even ask my children about their schoolwork."

Food Security: Harvesting Progress

Khwima and her husband, Edwin, are part of Pamoza's Family Partnership Program. With agricultural support and training, their family is growing food while also building new sources of income. Khwima sells tomatoes and onions, while Edwin operates a small grocery shop.

The family has even saved enough to purchase iron sheets for the roof of their home, an expensive investment for most rural families.

Across Pamoza communities, the impact is growing: 100% of beneficiaries surveyed reported improved crop yields and adoption of improved farming techniques. Families are learning practices such as manure making and improved planting methods that help them produce more from the land they already have.

Yet food security remains one of the greatest needs we hear from families. While harvests are improving, many households still do not grow enough food to last until the next harvest.

One farmer told us, "In our community, farming is our office. If there is no rain or fertilizer, we struggle."

Pamoza is helping families build the knowledge, skills, and resilience needed to move toward lasting food security and accessible income.
